EDUCATION
UNIVERSITY OF LONDON

Do you wonder sometimes
why you teach, how well you do it, and what's happening
to the profession as a whole?

You're not alone.

This innovative new MA
module provides the perfect
opportunity to stand back, take stock and return to the classroom with renewed focus and enthusiasm. All for £20.

to reclaim teaching

Reclaiming Teaching will support you as a teacher today in reviewing your professional purpose, reviving your motivation and appreciating your skills. The experience will give you the opportunity to develop as a professional learner and enquirer.

This course will enable you to:

- Take the first step in studying for your MA
- Review your professional purpose
- See the bigger picture of a teacher's experience today
- Appreciate and extend your skills
- Understand how you can develop your learning from this module towards an MA in Curriculum Studies or Effective Learning or School Effectiveness & School Improvement.

The ten themes will address:

- The teacher and 'career'
- The teacher as a learner
- Teachers' professional learning
- Teachers and the curriculum
- Teachers' voice on assessment
- Life in classrooms
- Teachers' experience in schools
- Teachers, identities, resistance
- Schools of the future
- Maintaining hopefulness as a teacher

The module will take place

Wednesday evenings from 30th April to 9th June 2003. Through ten evening sessions you will engage with a community of fellow professionals to review and extend your own professional and institutional goals.

Who is the module for?

The module will be of interest and value to practising classroom teachers from all phases of education and also those with responsibility for professional development in their school.

Cost

We are able to offer this special centenary module for £20. This includes all sessions and tutorial support.

Accreditation

This is a Masters level module for new students to the Institute. Successful completion will gain students 20 credits towards the 120 credit Masters degree. You will be supported and encouraged in compiling your coursework.
